

CAI → Computer Assisted Instruction

Computer-aided instruction (CAI) is a form of technology that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction.

1966 American Stanford University professor Patrick Suppes - is credited with the term "computer-assisted instruction" (CAI). He is often called the "father of CAI".

Computer-assisted instruction (CAI) is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction.

CAI is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction.

Meaning:

Definition of CAI :- Bhatt & Sharma (1992), "CAI is defined as an interaction between a student, a computer controlled display & a response entry device for the purpose of achieving educational outcomes."

CAI is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction. It is a form of instruction that uses computers to deliver instruction.

- Components of CAI →
- Hardware
  - Software
  - Instructional program or software
  - Hardware

